Case Study: CNH Industrial

In 2019, Zest Recycle was chosen to take over management of CNH Industrial's waste operations at its Basildon plant. The scale of the operation meant that the site generated a multitude of waste streams in significant volumes.

Our aim was to improve segregation and recycling rates while maximising efficiency across the board.

To achieve this, we identified a number of key areas to focus on:

- Wooden pallets that were being crushed for recycling (filling 4 roro containers) could in fact be reused. We sourced a supplier for reused pallets resulting in a reduction in the number of wood skips required by a third and the generation of a healthy rebate.
- Large volumes of cardboard packaging were being produced on-site, so we worked with CNH Industrial to optimise cardboard bale weights ensuring a much more efficient operation and helped them achieve optimum rebate values.
- We implemented a waste auditing programme utilising video footage of the general waste compactor to further identify steps and measures to extract maximum material for reuse and recycling.

“Sustainability is a key business driver for CNH Industrial, and through our partnership with Zest Recycle we have been able to significantly improve recycling rates, within the framework of our overall ambition of zero waste to landfill.” - Ryan Hopkin, CNH Industrial

Case Study: Whistl

Zest Recycle were involved in a recent project to transform Whistl's recycling activities at their fulfilment, mail and parcel centres.

Prior to implementing the new recycling system, waste generated from the fulfilment activities (except paper and cardboard) was being collected in mailbags and then emptied into general waste wheelie bins.

Together we identified that much of this material was recyclable, so a new system was implemented. Colour coded bags are now placed at fulfilment stations for easy segregation of waste streams. This waste is then placed into colour coded wheelies bins on the factory floor ready for on-site baling.

A training programme was delivered to support the scheme on launch, alongside promotional posters and clear signage to aid proper segregation at workstations.

“The identification of this opportunity and support to deliver the project by Robin and the team at Zest Recycle has been great to see on site, with a visibly clear output as a result of their efforts. I look forward to engaging further with Zest Recycle over the next 12 months as a strategic waste partner across the Whistl estate to help improve our ways of working, further advance our recycling capabilities and reduce our carbon emissions. Huge credit to Robin on the coordination and development of the programme.” - Christopher Stringer, Whistl
